Achievement and Intent

WINGATE COLLEGE • Wingate, North Carolina

In retrospect, college years give a kaleidoscopic impression.

The year is made up of pictures which blend together.

The first picture is of the alert, intent group of students, 1350 in number, from all parts east of the Mississippi, from other parts of the country, and from foreign countries too.

There is a high spirit of expectation among them . . . they seek to find a new life, for theirs is a goal of achievement and intent.

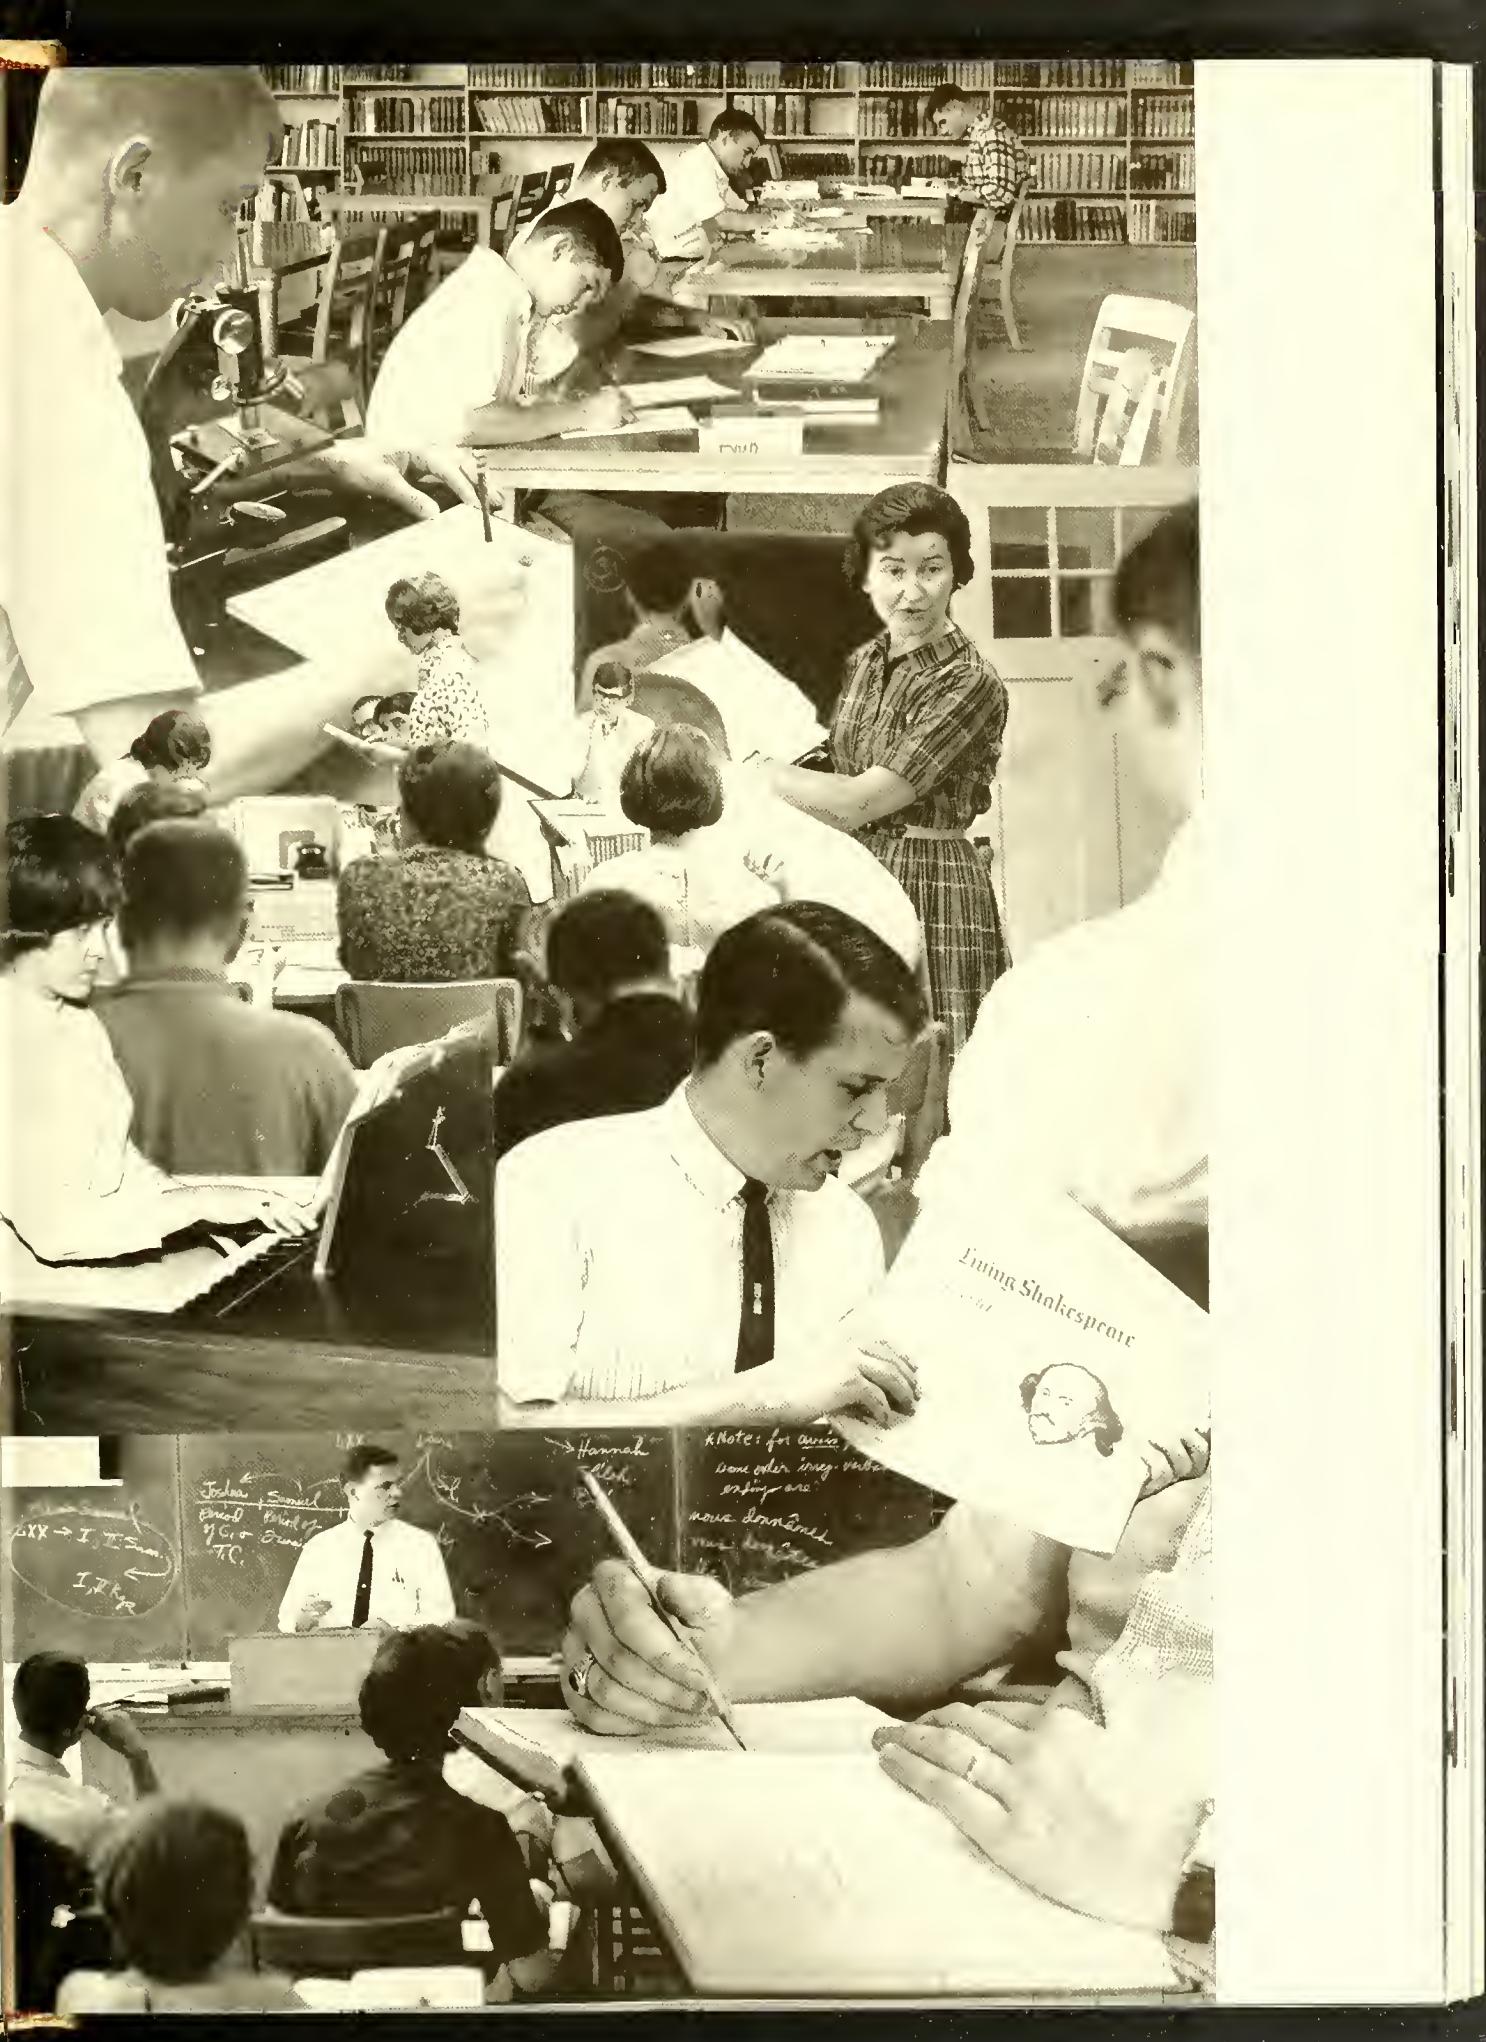

Our primary purpose—EDUCATION

Academic activities are strengthened by a work program which stresses educational values as its primary objective. It is difficult to separate or list the elements which contribute to a well-rounded program but at least a few of these include cultivating good study habits and attitudes, acquiring vocational guidance and training, developing spirit and abilities for creative activities, recognizing the dignity and importance of work, and appreciation of quality and beauty.

Collectively, these values result in a broadening of knowledge . . . both worldly and close at hand. Educating the young people on campus has always been the primary concern of Wingate College.

EDUCATION, then would precede all else as achievement and intent . . . but aids which enable the College to go about the business of Education in a more qualified way can be attributed to past achievements.

Achievements . . . past and present

During the last three years, eleven new buildings have been erected on campus.

- The Budd E. Smith Science Building provides the latest facilities for laboratory science courses.
- The Holbrook Dormitory, electrically heated and fully carpeted, accommodates sixty men.
- The J. Herbert Bridges Business Building provides classrooms, offices, laboratories, and auxiliary facilities for all business administration classes.
- Housing for the Remington Rand Univac and other electronic equipment has been provided.
- The Bell Tower, another significant addition to the campus, was a gift by Mr. Pete Verna. The Memorial Bell was a gift of Mr. D. C. Belk, and the Norton Chimes were presented a year later by Mrs. Joe Ross, Sr., of Monroe in memory of her husband.
- The M. B. Dry Memorial Chapel, which adjoins the right lobby of the Webb-Austin Auditorium, was erected by the students of the late Professor Dry, the first administrator of the school.
- Northwood, the president's home, is so designed that both formal college entertaining and family living can be conducted.
- The Music Building, a six room house, contains seven pianos, an Allen organ, and a large classroom for music appreciation classes.
- Ten Faculty Apartments and seven homes have been erected.
- Tucker Hall, a modern building which houses one hundred and twenty women in fifteen suites, was dedicated in January of this year.
- The W. T. Harris Dining Hall is designed to accommodate 1,500 students and four small dining rooms.

Intent . . . continued improvements of college facilities

In the life of a college . . . as in the life of a man and all his institutions, one must constantly strive for improvement.

The society we serve and the institutions in which we work are in continuous change.

Without continued growth, our college program may lag behind the new conditions they should and must continue to meet.

In the years ahead, we must constantly seek to improve . . . to develop staff . . . and to maximize student maturation towards those goals of educational and personal growth which characterize a liberal arts college.

Planning is of necessity based on certain assumptions. Looking at the prospects for the role of education in future years, we believe the need to secure and hold fine teachers should prevail.

During the last ten years considerable effort has been placed on the improvement of college facilities. Very significant progress has been made . . . new dormitories, new classroom buildings, and general improvement. These should make possible the increased enrollment that we have projected.

and a deep sense of appreciation of the innumerable friends of Wingate College who make its work possible. Friends, past and present, have given generously of their affectionate interest and support that the college might be strong and good. This picture includes the Board of Trustees with gratefulness for their concern and devotion. The trustees provide leadership, stability, farsighted wisdom and encouragement for the great tasks Wingate College has undertaken.

The administration and members of the faculty are happy in the opportunities afforded them in the work of the college and are deeply appreciative of those who assume willingly and well the ultimate responsibility for the character and quality of the institution.

Not to be overlooked are the student leaders who give unselfishly of their time and interest to promote the betterment of the individual student and the life he lives at Wingate College.

A final picture is the Student World . . .

filled with mixed emotions, ambitions, the desire to live up to expectations, but sensing, too, that only mutual friends of the same age . . . living in these hurried times . . . can completely understand the anxieties . . . the disappointments . . . the joys . . . the excitement of youth . . . and even the occasional desire to rebel against the pressures and tensions that are prevalent in colleges everywhere.

Students, as a whole, can understand that most of the experiences are merely part of "growing up" and gained has been some knowledge of the great forces for good and evil that are at work in the world.

Prevalent is the fact that theirs is an opportunity to grow . . . and develop into individuals of character and integrity who can be devoted to righteousness and justice.

On Commencement Day, graduates will sit together in caps and gowns . . . with mixed emotions . . . happy and sad . . . but serious . . . ready to graduate, yet conscious of how much they have yet to learn.

Soon they will walk life's path . . . finding some days clouded by thundering rainstorms . . . but discovering, too, that following the rain will come the brightness of sunlight, making the glistening raindrops even more beautiful. This is life!

Our President,
DR. BUDD E. SMITH . . .
as seen by the students

"In retrospect, college years give a kaleidoscopic impression" . . . this was the beginning thought which led us to choose our theme, Achievement and Intent. As students, we see our president in much the same light. Words cannot express the determination, the willpower, the foresight, the endurance, the faith, and the trials that have carried through in Dr. Smith's devotion to young people.

Only those who know him . . . and those who have worked with him can really understand the greatness that is a large part of his "kaleidoscopic world."

Traditionally, the president's message to the students appears here, but we felt that this particular book could differ, due to the close relationship to the personality of the president we have grown to love and understand. It was without his knowledge that his message to us was replaced with this one to him. We hope he will understand and accept it as a tribute.

To quote Dr. Smith, "All of us are aware that when we are willing to invest in young people, we are investing in eternity."

Sincerely,

The Students of Wingate College

DEDICATION

*We wish to extend our appreciation to Mrs. Ethel Knott Smith
for her patience, understanding,
and unlimited knowledge in counseling students.*

Through her role as librarian and first lady,

Mrs. Smith has become endeared to us all.

Besides acting in her official capacities, she can always be counted upon to do her share in any extra-curricular activity.

*Frankness, honesty, and keen intellect are characteristics that make her the fine librarian that she is.
With our deepest gratitude, The Gate Staff humbly dedicates THE 1965 GATE to
Mrs. Ethel Knott Smith.*

The term education is derived from the term educo—to lead out.
In its earliest application it was meant to denote a leading out of darkness into light.

A person grasping in the dark has difficulty in finding his way;
he cannot perceive things as they really are, but only dimly, through the partial comprehension of his touch only.

He is confused, alone and frustrated.

Willingly he takes a hand and is led into the light where he sees things with a totality of understanding previously denied him.

He moves toward the light through his own effort,
but with others as leaders,
to show the way that he could not have found alone.

Though this is but a comparative illustration, it reveals a portion of the kaleidoscopic image or the theme we are striving to portray . . .

Achievement and Intent.

THE SOPHOMORE CLASS

*Though nothing can bring back the hour
Of splendor in the grass, of glory in the flower;
We will grieve not, rather find Strength in what remains behind.*

If Wordsworth had been quoting these lines for us, they could not have been more symbolic of Wingate to her students.

THE HOUR . . . As for the hours that we spend here—they are but the foundation for the successful hour of the future for which Wingate has prepared us.

THE SPLENDOR . . . No one can deny Wingate's beauty and elegance—the campus, its stately halls, but particularly the panoramic magnificence of the May Day festivities which climax the year's endeavors.

THE GLORY . . . A sense of victory prevailed as some members of the class were inducted into honor societies or as the play cast took their final curtain call or as the team won that all-important basketball game.

THE GRIEF . . . The melancholy mood and the ultimate grief felt in the hearts of the graduates were symbolic of the loyalty of the alumni to Wingate.

THE STRENGTH . . . could only be found in the unfailing guidance and the sincere interest of the administration and the faculty for the students at Wingate College. Thus, the laid foundation branches out into maturity and the world.

WHAT REMAINS BEHIND? . . . memories and a sincere devotion.

FRESHMAN CLASS OFFICERS

Al Lineberry, President; Harold Brown, Vice-President; Sharon Absher, Secretary-Treasurer.

THE FRESHMAN CLASS

And there we stood—freshmen once again—expectant, a bit unsure, and quite frustrated at the inconceivable number and length of the many lines before us. There was a line at the business office, a line at the book store, and a line at the cafeteria. Many of us wondered if it were possible to survive all the orientation and instruction; all the waiting, anxiety, and anticipation. Making new friends was the least of our problems. Most of us had never thought of all the countless little things that had to be done, all the rules and regulations that had to be remembered, and all the loose ends that had to be tied. Many of us were confronted, for the first time, with the adjustment problem associated with being far away from home. The majority of us were just beginning to realize the responsibility involved in obtaining a college education—and all of us were silently wondering if we could make it. Would we survive it all?

Survive we did—and gloriously! We were not "green freshmen" for long. In a matter of a few weeks, all of us were firmly assured of our position as college students. We were aware of our goals, and assured of our successes. We evolved from frightened immaturity into veteran maturity so quickly that our past anxieties and frustrations soon became only misty memories, and we were confidently looking toward the future with its promises of fruitfulness.

The first evidence of our maturity, discretion, and spirit was seen in the wisdom of our election of class officers. The campaign was spirited and intense, culminating in the election of Al Lineberry, Harold Brown, and Shayron Absher as president, vice-president, and secretary-treasurer, respectively. These students proved to be wise choices, and their leadership was strong and influential. Under this leadership, the whole student body benefited with a new movie screen and many good movies.

Aside from good leadership, our Freshman Class had many other attributes. There were many freshmen active in many phases of campus life. There were freshmen in the Wingate College Choir; there were freshmen excelling in athletics; there were freshmen as cheerleaders, as parts of the radio staff, and there were freshmen on the Dean's List. Our Freshman Class became an integral part of Wingate College campus life. We did not stand in the background and only watch the play—we were in it! And we played our parts well. Today we can stand on the threshold of Tomorrow, and look back. We can be proud. We accomplished much, and, because of our growth, the future will be richer for all of us.

Our Director of Admissions, Mr. Cox, needs the rest he seems to be enjoying!

The perspective of one man is limited!
The progress of civilization is measured by the work of many men possessing different personalities and separate thoughts, but each contributing a share to the mass of knowledge and achievement that is our social heritage.

In an individual student's progress towards personal fulfillment he closes ranks with others of common interests in order to remove the original dimness of the mind's eye.
From the associations fostered by activities, we learn to see with the eyes of others,
to understand people different from ourselves, and to participate in the compounding of ideas and personalities that composes the unity of man.

Thus, activities add a portion of a kaleidoscopic image . . .

Achievement and Intent.

The unity of a college resides in the harmony of its elements.
A building accentuates individual achievements and excellence,
never the total product of a machine-tooled society,
but always the concerted effort of a group of craftsmen each enjoying the individual freedom of artistic expression within the limits of the architectural plan.

The essence of teamwork is this spirit of individual expression ordered by discipline.
Guards, forwards, batters, pitchers, coaches, . . .
each doing his own work as best he can,
gives meaning to the activity of the other.
Each member of the team realizes that his own personal achievement, noteworthy as it may be, is as nothing if it does not aid in the attainment of the common objective.
Success, we learn, comes from the proper coordination of many working towards the same goal . . .

The aspects of life are many faceted and diverse; so too, and fittingly, are the aspects of a college. We have considered the main pictures of our "kaleidoscopic college world," the students, their teachers, and their activities. Were these the only elements, the college would not be experiencing the full reality of life.

To neglect the social side of man is to neglect a true part.

Choosing those students who are deserving of recognition . . . emphasizing character, beauty, participation and scholastic achievements . . . all of these with the moments of joy and enrichment possess a marked social character for the average well-adjusted college student.

The social phase of a college is not merely another member of the body.

It is the unifying factor, performing the same function as those portions which blend to reveal a total picture . . .

Achievement and Intent.
